

School has changed dramatically over the past several months.

Hundreds of millions of children remain out of school, while millions more face uncertainty in the remainder of or coming school year.

When school is disrupted, vulnerable children — girls, children with learning gaps, or those living in high-poverty or isolated communities — tend to be the most negatively impacted. Many children are at risk of not returning to school.

Standing side-by-side teachers is more critical than ever.

Throughout the crisis, school systems, as they often do, find themselves at the center of the crisis response. Many teachers and school leaders have limited or no experience delivering a remote learning or hybrid learning experience. Working with teachers and schools around the world to develop innovative solutions to keep all children engaged and learning is a critical and urgent challenge.

This is TeachUNITED's mission and the role we continue to play in our schools and the broader educational community.

YOUR SUPPORT COUNTS

Here is how the TeachUNITED community is supporting schools:

- Coaches are delivering our program 100% virtually.
- Local teams have delivered more than 1,300 hours of remote coaching.
- Coaching teams are providing free resources for any teacher, anywhere.

COUNTRY HIGHLIGHTS

Tanzania

Hosted the first-ever teacher workshops via webinar, with teachers and district officials overcoming significant technological and connectivity hurdles to participate.

Costa Rica

The National Ministry of Education requested that TU coaches deliver workshops for an additional 29 schools to help them make the transition to remote, distance learning.

United States

Demand for our coaching services has grown by 3x in 3 months as we support schools transitioning between in-school, hybrid, and remote learning with adaptable high-impact teaching strategies.

MOVING FORWARD

Supporting teachers is critical for immediate COVID-19 response and for broader efforts to improve educational equity in schools around the world. Our focus remains on serving underserved and rural schools where access to support and resources is limited. We will continue to stand side-by-side with teachers and principals to listen, learn, and evolve in order to come out stronger, more resilient, and more equitable.

“Education is the starting point for economic opportunity - an opportunity all children deserve. We support TeachUNITED as they have consistently demonstrated a commitment to school innovation and teacher quality. Even during school closures, TeachUNITED has provided partner teachers with innovative coaching and tools to be leaders during these challenging times. Now more than ever, ensuring all children have access to high-quality education is an equity issue.”
